Good work. More room to grow.

Centring & Beedy • Visual identity and designer handoff • Version 1.0

A little company.
A clearer next step.

Editorial typography.

Kiwi green.

Warm, hand-drawn character.

Space to think.

The creative direction

Pair the confidence of a clear, spacious editorial system with the warmth of a small, grounded kiwi. Beedy makes the experience approachable; Centring makes the next step useful.

INSIDE / Brand foundations · Color · Sentient · Character · Reference views · Layout · Voice · Motion · Handoff

Centring is the brand.

Beedy is Centring’s kiwi companion. Keep their roles clear in every application.

Who we serve

Small nonprofit teams: the people finding funding, shaping programs and preparing applications while carrying many other responsibilities.

What we promise

Help people find a useful next step, make their ideas clearer and prepare work for their team to review. Never promise funding success or imply that a draft is automatically ready to submit.

The relationship

Use “Centring” for the company and product. Introduce “Beedy, Centring’s kiwi companion” on first use. Keep Centring visible in standalone mascot campaigns. Use the spelling Beedy consistently.

Four qualities to design for

Grounded: clear structure and useful information.
Curious: thoughtful prompts and an attentive character.
Warm: organic texture, gentle humor and welcoming language.
Capable: legible interfaces, precise labels and human control.

Core message: “You bring the purpose. We’ll help you find a way forward.”

Kiwi green. Warm earth.

Core interface colors below are taken from the website source. Character colors are sampled production starting points.

Kiwi green

#8EE53F

RGB 142 / 229 / 63 Primary accent, action fill, bow tie target.

Ink

#20221E

RGB 32 / 34 / 30 Headlines, body text and dark buttons.

Paper

#FFFFFF

RGB 255 / 255 / 255 Primary canvas. Preserve generous white space.

Beedy chestnut

#CB6535

RGB 203 / 101 / 53 Sampled body midtone; proposed flat-art base.

Beak & feet

#FDC582

RGB 253 / 197 / 130 Sampled pale ochre; preserve warm variation.

Character ink

#291D12

RGB 41 / 29 / 18 Sampled dark detail; warm hand-drawn outlines.

Supporting UI tokens: soft surface #F6F7F3 · muted text #6C7067 · divider #DFE2DA · green hover #7BD32D · focus #497E1D.

Color balance: let white dominate. Use green for the primary action and a few purposeful marks; keep brown primarily in Beedy. Do not recolor him green. His textured artwork has many brown shades, not one uniform fill.

Character samples come from the existing raster artwork and require a visual match before becoming final illustration tokens. Do not flatten or recolor the master to match a single swatch. Print conversions require a printer-specific proof.

Sentient carries the character.

Use real font files for typography. Lettering baked into generated artwork is not a font specimen.

Good work.

More room to grow.

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ

abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 0123456789

The type system

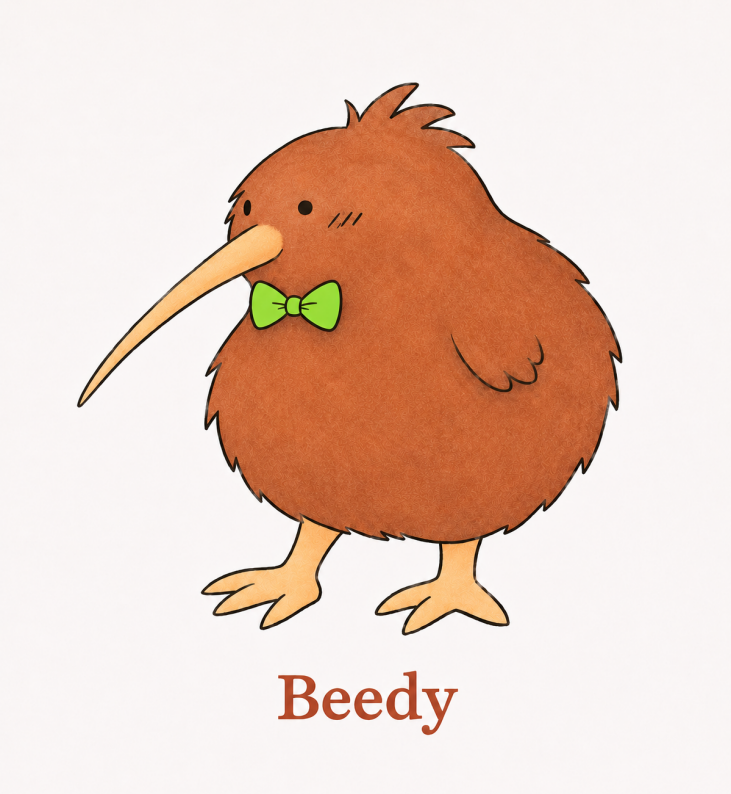

Sentient Regular (400): primary headlines and editorial statements.
Sentient Italic (400): a short phrase of emphasis or a personal note.
Sentient Medium (500): wordmark and restrained secondary emphasis.
Arial / Helvetica: functional body copy, navigation, forms and data, matching the current website.

Recommended digital scale
Hero: 64–144 px / 1.0–1.1 line height; adapt to the viewport.
Section heading: 40–68 px / 1.1. Card title: 24–32 px / 1.2.
Body: 16–18 px / 1.5–1.7. UI labels: 14–16 px / 1.4.
These are proposed handoff ranges; the website uses smaller sizes in its illustrative demo.

Keep body tracking normal. Use tighter headline tracking sparingly and inspect every line break. Avoid all-italic paragraphs, stretched letters and faux bold. Source fonts from Fontshare and retain the supplied license. Web fallback: Georgia for Sentient, Arial for UI.

The Beedy identity anchor.

Preserve the silhouette, face, texture and bow tie together. They make him recognizable.

Keep these features

Round, squat chestnut body.

Long, slim, tapered ochre beak.

Tiny dark bead eyes.

Swept crown tufts.

Three short cheek hatches.

Small, feathered wings.

Short legs and three-toed feet.

Lime bow tie with central knot.

Slightly irregular dark outlines.

Fine pencil-like grain.

A warm drawing, not a different creature

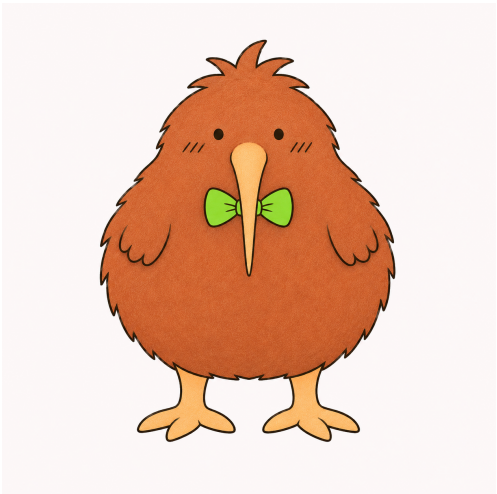

Use the supplied master when commissioning new poses. Keep the body round and the beak slender. Avoid glossy eyes, realistic fur, plastic 3D shading, an elongated body, extra limbs, new clothing or a tail.

Placement rules — proposed: leave at least one bow-tie width around the complete silhouette. Preserve the beak tip, crown and feet. Start detailed full-body art at 160 px wide and inspect at final size; smaller uses need an approved simplified asset.

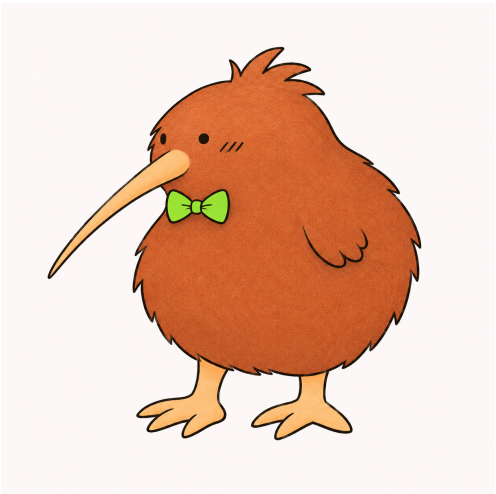

Reference above is the website artwork. The baked-in “Beedy” label is part of the source image, not an approved wordmark. Typeset new labels in Sentient outside the illustration.

One character. Every angle.

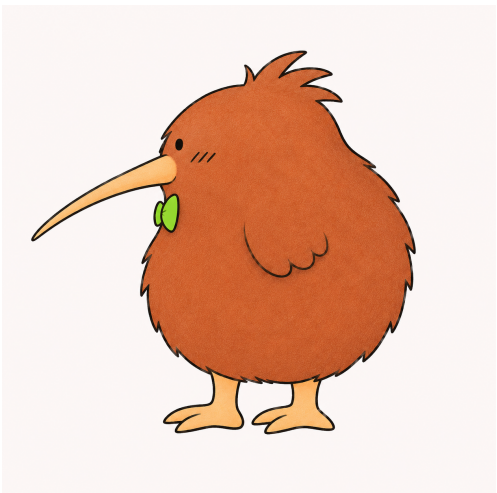

Existing turnaround concepts support orientation; the original master remains the identity authority.

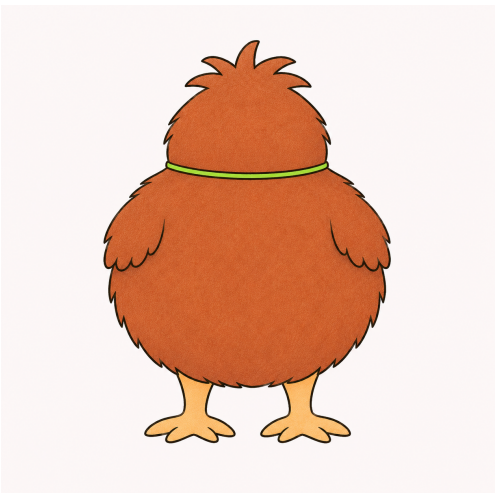

Front

Three-quarter

Profile

Rear

View logic: front and three-quarter views show two eyes; a profile shows one; rear views show none. The bow sits on the front of the neck. Only its attachment band may be visible from behind.

These are approximate illustrated references, not a calibrated rotation sequence or a 3D rig. Resolve differences in body proportions, feather shapes and texture against the master before production. Waving, reading and thinking assets are pose concepts pending the same cleanup.

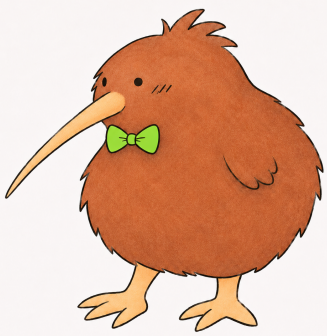

Give the good work room.

The live site pairs oversized serif headlines, asymmetry, a quiet canvas and selective green accents.

Centring

Good work.
More room to grow.

Find your next step

Beedy

Illustrative layout: a single message, a single action and one Beedy placement.

Structure & rhythm

Use a generous grid: proposed 12 columns on desktop, 4 on mobile. Keep 5–6% side margins, 64–120 px between major sections and a 4 / 8 / 16 / 24 / 32 / 48 / 64 spacing scale. Stack text and artwork on small screens.

Shapes & marks

Use near-square buttons with 4 px corners; cards use 6–12 px corners, thin neutral borders and subtle shadows. Use one green underline, a small dot, a loose orbit or a light hand-drawn arrow when it supports the message. Avoid decorating every heading.

Wordmark: Sentient Medium “Centring” with a small green dot, following the site. Maintain live text until an approved vector master exists. Proposed clear space: the height of the capital C; test smaller than 100 px wide before use.

Useful. Warm. Unhurried.

Speak to capable people doing meaningful work. Make the action clear before adding personality.

Lead with what someone can do

“Find your next step.”
“Shape your idea.”
“Review the details with your team.”
Use short sentences, familiar words and a specific action.

Beedy’s voice

A thoughtful companion who welcomes, notices and helps. Use “Oh, hello.” for an introduction and “One small step.” for gentle encouragement. Let product instructions carry the detail. Avoid baby talk, forced cheerfulness and guilt.

Keep the promise honest

Use: “A first draft for your team to review.”
Avoid: “Your winning application is ready.”

Use: “Check eligibility and the deadline with the funder.”
Avoid: “Beedy has verified everything” unless that exact check is supported.

Match the moment

Welcome: wave or neutral standing pose.
Planning: thinking pose beside one useful question.
Preparation: reading pose beside instructions.
Errors: explanation and recovery action first; no celebratory mascot.
Completion: small celebration only for a confirmed completed action.

A gentle pull. Then a pause.

Beedy’s motion should explain progress and make space for reading.

The website’s signature motion

Beedy leads the walkthrough cards with a short scroll-linked tug, then rests. Preserve that rhythm: anticipation, small movement, settled reading state. Keep the rope attached convincingly to the character and card.

Animation direction

Use a fixed camera, subtle breathing, a single blink, a slight head tilt or a brief wave. Keep the beak, eyes, feet and bow tie stable. Proposed timing: 180–300 ms for interface transitions; 0.8–1.5 seconds for a small character gesture. Avoid frantic bouncing and endless attention-seeking loops.

Readable color pairs

Ink #20221E on Kiwi green: approximately 10.3:1.
Ink on white: approximately 16.0:1.
White on Kiwi green: approximately 1.6:1 — avoid for text.
These ratios describe flat colors; image texture and overlays need separate checks.

Comfort & access

Honor reduced-motion settings with a static character and readable content. Keep keyboard focus visible, provide pause controls for persistent movement, and use no autoplay sound. Do not communicate status through color alone. Keep essential copy out of images and use descriptive alt text for meaningful Beedy placements.

Suggested alt text: “Beedy, Centring’s brown kiwi companion, wearing a bright green bow tie.” Use empty alt text when the illustration is purely decorative.

Keep the system consistent.

Use this guide as the working visual system and record changes in one shared asset library.

Deliverables for the next designer

Create the Centring vector wordmark; a clean Beedy master without baked-in lettering; approved front, profile and rear views; consistent welcome, reading and thinking poses; and a small-size simplified icon. Supply SVG where genuinely vector, transparent PNG at 1×/2×, editable source, color profile and font license.

What is established / what needs a decision

Established: Centring and Beedy naming, Sentient family, #8EE53F green, website neutral tokens and the supplied master’s visual identity.
Proposed in this guide: sampled character color tokens, spacing scale, type ranges, minimum sizes, clear space and motion timing.
Confirm with the brand owner: flat character palette, final vector logo, simplified icon and cleaned production pose set.

Release check

Correct names and actual Sentient font. Green matches the token. Character matches the master. Complete silhouette and clear space. Legible text and focus states. Mobile and reduced-motion checks. Accurate product claims. One clear action. Versioned source files and exports.

Source register

Website reviewed 6 November 2026: centring-kiwi.loftyninja.chatgpt.site/#beedy. Local website source: app/globals.css, app/page.tsx and public/beedy.png. Existing references: Centring-Beedy-Mascot-Marketing-Guide.docx; Beedy turnaround master, PNGs and generation notes. Font source: fontshare.com/fonts/sentient. Character swatches: median samples from the website raster artwork, not prior approved flat colors.