Neo-fundraising

An approach to fundraising that combines organizational knowledge, funding intelligence and artificial intelligence to guide funding strategy and execution.

It connects what an organization knows about its work with where it seeks funding, how it presents its case and what it learns from the results. Program records, financial information, impact evidence and funding history become a maintained foundation for fundraising decisions.

OUR POSITION

Centring is building the technology and methods for Neo-fundraising. We help nonprofits translate their institutional knowledge into the capacity to secure funding.

Our work connects organizational understanding, opportunity assessment and application development so fundraising knowledge remains useful across funding cycles and staff changes.

OUR COMMITMENTS

Organizational understanding. Funding strategy should reflect the nonprofit's mission, programs, resources and demonstrated impact.

Informed execution. Opportunity selection and application development should draw on relevant evidence and funder requirements.

Continuity. Knowledge gained through fundraising should remain available to the organization and inform subsequent decisions.

VALUE FOR CLIENTS

Less time reconstructing information, clearer decisions about which opportunities to pursue, and stronger, more consistent applications. Professional judgment and relationships remain central; technology increases the organization's capacity to support them.
